

I have worked many years in the television news business, and I want to voice my strong opposition to the proposed changes in media ownership rules. It's naive to think expanded ownership will not result in fewer voices, fewer perspectives on the news. In a democracy, that would be dangerous. We've already seen evidence of the reduced availability of information in markets where there is one primary media owner. The citizenry is overwhelmingly opposed to this change. No one wants it but the fat cats who will prosper. There is no benefit to the public interest -- and our interests should be foremost for the FCC. Thank you for consideration of my opinion.

Sarah Scott
Olympia, WA